TOTAL RECALL

Will Wisconsin voters opt to end governor's term Tuesday?

Chicago Tribune

On Tuesday, Wisconsin voters will decide the fate of Gov. Scott Walker, a beleaguered Republican leader under fire after supporting legislation to limit public workers' collective bargaining rights.

Walker will face Milwaukee Mayor Tom Barrett, a Democrat, in the recall election after more than 900,000 signatures were collected in support of pushing Walker out of office.

Only two U.S. governors have been successfully recalled, but hundreds of elected officials have faced the threat. Some were voted out. Many survived.

In one Nebraska town, two mayors were recalled just months apart in 1987 and early 1988. First, Mayor Dick Zellaha was recalled as mayor of tiny Alliance—population 8,500—when he was accused of using the town's stationery and copy machine for personal matters. Just 29 days later, his successor, Duane Worley, was recalled after he refused to fire the city manager. And the next mayor, Richard Robb, barely escaped a recall effort when petitioners were unable to collect enough signatures.

Recall elections are growing more popular, said Joshua Spivak, a senior fellow with the Hugh L. Carey Institute for Government Reform at Wagner College, who writes about the topic. But it's not just anger and frustration with elected officials that send voters back to the polls, he said.

"Technology has played a strong and important role in making recalls more likely to happen," Spivak said. "Technology has made it easier to get on the ballot, to organize people and run a campaign. People see that recalls work—they are frequently successful."

Last year, there were 151 recall elections nationwide, and 85 of those resulted in the public official losing office, Spivak said

Some notable recall attempts:

4 THAT WORKED

1987: Democratic Omaha, Neb., Mayor Mike Boyle was elected in 1981 but was removed by voters six years later after he was accused of insulting local leaders and government employees. The recall effort took off after Boyle also was accused of abusing his power in the firing of a police chief.

2003: Less than 10 years after Gray Davis was touted as having presidential potential, the California governor was recalled by voters. During his time in office, Davis faced a $38 billion budget deficit and an energy crisis. He lost the support of fellow Democrats when he vetoed an overhaul of workers' compensation and a bill that would have banned racial profiling. The recall ushered in the era of Gov. Arnold Schwarzenegger.

2005: After an Internet sex scandal, James West became the first Spokane, Wash., city official ever recalled. The Republican mayor acknowledged having sexual relations with adult men after a local newspaper published the results of a computer sting it conducted. According to The Spokesman-Review, West had online conversations about sex with someone he thought was an 18-year-old high school student. Sixty-five percent of voters supported his recall.

2011: The former Miami-Dade County mayor formed strong enemies after he gave pay raises to his closest aides. But when Carlos Alvarez negotiated salary increases for county workers and then began to raise property taxes, voters decided it was time for him to go.

4 THAT DIDN'T

1978: Cleveland Mayor Dennis Kucinich barely survived a recall that came after he fired the police chief. That firing led to a two-day police strike and put him at odds with the City Council. Kucinich, now a member of the U.S. House of Representatives, later twice ran for president.

1983: Organizers tried to remove San Francisco Mayor Dianne Feinstein from office because of her support of gun control. But the Democratic mayor won support in the recall vote and stayed in office. She's currently seeking her fifth term in the U.S. Senate.

2009: Voters in Akron, Ohio, spent more than $195,000 trying to remove Don Plusquellic from his position as mayor. Organizers of that recall blamed the city's budget woes on overspending by Plusquellic. He was the first Akron mayor to face a recall vote but remained in office.

2011: Omaha Mayor Jim Suttle faced a recall vote brought on by his support of a tax hike during a budget crisis. He also was criticized for being a member of the group Mayors Against Illegal Guns. But in that election, unlike with Mike Boyle 24 years earlier, Omaha voters opted to keep their mayor. TRIBUNE FILE PHOTOS

Here comes the Red ache

Tracy Swartz

'13 is bound to be an unlucky number for many South Side Red Line riders.

The CTA announced Monday that it will shut down the Red Line from the Cermak-Chinatown station to the orth Street stop for five months starting in May 2013. The agency will reconstruct the corresponding 43-year-old track and make the Garfield, 63rd Street and 87th Street stations accessible for riders with disabilities.

In the interim, the 50,000 riders who use the South Side Red Line each weekday will be relegated to shuttle buses and/or the Green Line, which runs parallel to the Red Line about a half-mile or more away.

While the agency was light on details for its proposal for Red Line alternatives, one thing is certain: South Siders will continue their slow commute for another year, followed by five months of train pains.

Make no mistake, the southern section of the Red Line needs help. A portion of the Dan Ryan branch has been under slow zone since August 2006, according to maps posted on the CTA's website.

Last month, nearly 30 percent of this track was under slow zone, and most of the affected track saw trains traveling 15 mph.

CTA Board Chairman Terry Peterson said Monday that trains in that area should be traveling at 55 mph. When the $425 million project is complete, the trip between 95th Street and Cermak/Chinatown will be 10 minutes faster, the CTA said.

But the shutdown comes at the time of the year when Chicago depends heavily on the Red Line: baseball and tourist season. Sox-35th will be closed during construction, and Sox fans and visitors will use the 35th-Bronzeville Green Line stop or Metra's 35th Street "Lou" Jones station.

The shutdown also may burden the Garfield Green Line stop in Washington Park. Shuttle buses will bring riders from the 95th. 87th, 70th and 60th street Red Line stations to the Garfield Green Line stop, which sees about 1,300 riders each weekday. About 30,000 riders use those four Red Line stations each weekday.

Also, 11 CTA buses connect to the 95th Street Red Line station. Riders south of 95th Street who take a bus to the 95th Red Line station now would take a bus to a shuttle bus to the Garfield Green Line.

In presenting its plan Monday, the CTA said it would offer free rail entry for shuttle bus riders at the Garfield Green Line stop, expanded bus service on existing South Side routes and 50-cent discounted bus rides on some South Side routes but did not detail how these discounts would work and which routes would be discounted.

The CTA said it would hold community meetings and hammer out the details of its plan over the next year-just enough time for South Side riders to make vacation plans to avoid a bummer summer.

Work weekend

The CTA will shuttle riders between the Main Street and Davis Street Purple Line stations this weekend as the agency continues its work on Purple Line viaducts.

Meanwhile, go to redeyechicago.com/ goingpublic for a video showing CTA plans for the Granville stop, which closed Friday.

STATIONARY A weekly dispatch from a CTA station of note

This week: Francisco Brown Line

At the Francisco stop, the red (and orange, blue and pink) "carpet" has been rolled out for riders. Since 2007, the entrance of the Brown Line station in Albany Park has featured a floral mosaic called "carpet," a tile representation of an Oriental rug. But after five years, the "L"-come mat is starting to show wear. Some of the tiles near the tracks of the street-level station are broken and could use repair. The bloom has come off the road a bit.

Next up: Adams/Wabash in the Loop.

Kind of a quiet day for CTA news, eh? Just kidding. The CTA's announcement Monday that it is planning to close the south branch of the Red Line, from Cermak-Chinatown to 95th, ruffled a few feathers on social media. Thanks to Twitter and Facebook, we got to see a lot of lame jokes about White Sox attendance, some North Siders showing little sympathy for those who will be affected and general frustration from commuters. We rounded up some of the more interesting responses.

You guys realize there is another CTA station about 2 blocks east of Sox-35th, right? The slow zones on the Red Line are HORRIBLE, they're never going to fix them with trains, the long-term pay-off will be worth a few months of inconvenience. - Matt Michel

The CTA will also be giving out @Enstrumental *Chicago Hates You" shirts to all South Side red line

-@espnchijon

Do you have any idea what would happen if the CTA came out and said the Red Line was going to be shut down from Fullerton to Howard for 5 months?

I get that the city doesn't want to drag out Red Line repairs. but closing off such a large chunk of the route seems kind of [bleep]ish. -@SSS_Ugod

Because the Sox already draw so well. it makes sense to close the Sox-35th Red Line stop during the season next year

NO PAIN, NO TRAIN

CITY OFFICIALS CHOOSE LESSER OF 2 HEADACHES FOR RED LINE REPAIRS

Chicago Tribune

In deciding to close the south leg of the Red Line for five months starting in May, CTA officials bet that short, intense pain will be easier to suffer through than several years of track construction migraines.

South Side aldermen—previously briefed on the merits of speeding repairs with a complete shutdown of the Dan Ryan branch rather than a weekends-only one that would stretch over four years—came out in support of the "rip-off-the-Band-Aid" approach.

But Mayor Emanuel stayed conspicuously away from the news conference where transit officials announced the $425 million project, which will close almost 10 miles of track and nine stations, from the Cermak-Chinatown stop all the way to 95th Street.

The daring plan to close the entire Dan Ryan branch had been a well-kept secret, allowing transit officials to muster their talking points and their alternative routes.

The plan features strong aldermanic support of the accelerated work rather than closing the Dan Ryan branch only on weekends until 2016.

"I'd rather peel the Band-Aid off than do the same work over an extended period of time," Ald. Roderick Sawyer (6th) said. "It's not going to be pleasant. But I'm glad we got the word out now and ultimately the service is going to be better for riders."

The Dan Ryan branch, which is dominated by straightaways that would permit 55 mph top speeds if the track were in good repair, has the highest percentage of slow zones among all eight CTA rail lines. Slow zones would increase to 60 percent next year if the project were delayed, officials said.

New steel rails, ties and ballast will be installed and drainage improvements made between the State Street subway portal, which is north of the Cermak-Chinatown station, and the 95th Street terminal at the end of the Red Line, according to the CTA's plan.

CTA Board Chairman Terry Peterson lamented that currently "a cyclist can travel

A cyclist can travel faster than our trains do on that stretch."

–CTA Board Chairman Terry Peterson on the need for repairs to the south leg of the Red Line faster than our trains do on that stretch."

"It will be a brand new railroad" when the work is completed around September 2013, Peterson said. "There is no way you can do a project of this scope and size without impacting service," he said.

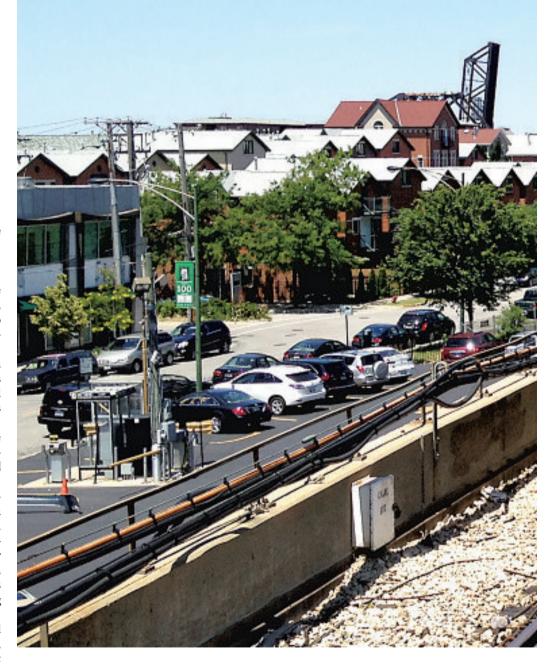

The promise of hundreds of construction jobs and up to 200 permanent new CTA bus driver jobs to South Side residents likely will generate support for the project, officials said.

Peterson vowed that the CTA will hire minority-owned companies for up to 30 percent of the work under the disadvantaged business enterprise program.

The offer of jobs to low-income Chicagoans stands in stark contrast to a Metra project. Metra is embroiled in a dispute with U.S. Rep. Bobby Rush and other African-American congressmen over the commuter railroad's handling of an upcoming train bridge project in Englewood. The lawmakers say not enough minorities would be working on the $141 million project.

The CTA also will save an estimated $75 million by consolidating the work, CTA President Forrest Claypool said. It means money will be left over to improve stations, including installing elevators at three stops—Garfield, 63rd Street and 87th Street—he said.

The need for the track reconstruction, which also serves as a precursor for the planned extension of the Red Line from 95th to 130th streets whenever federal funds are made available, prompted aldermen in addition to Sawyer to line up behind the fivemonth timetable to cease service.

"I'm not excited about the inconvenience residents are going to have, but I am excited about the all new rails and permanent jobs and 100 additional buses to accommodate commuters," said Ald. Anthony Beale (9th), chairman of the City Council's Transportation and Infrastructure Committee.

Stretching out the repairs over four years would "set the Red Line extension back," Beale said.

PLANS TO REBUILD THE RED LINE

On Monday, the CTA announced plans to rebuild the tracks, along with other improvements, on the Dan Ryan branch of the Red Line. The plan will shut down service next year from Cermak-Chinatown to 95th/Dan Ryan for five months. This plan will save $75 million over a previous weekend-only work outline. That savings will be used on upgrades such as elevators and lighting along the south Red Line.

Riders wary of sped-up plan

Chicago Tribune

Even though commutes on the south Red Line will be shortened by up to 20 minutes when the track-replacement project is completed and slow zones are lifted late next year, many affected riders, from Chinatown to Roseland, couldn't help but worry Monday about the upcoming pain.

Lucinda Myles said slow zones caused by deteriorated track have made the ride unbearable. Trains must travel at speeds as slow as 15 mph on 40 percent of the Dan Ryan branch because of deteriorated track.

The track project "is going to be a pain," said Myles, 33, a daily Red Line rider who works in the food industry, "but in the end service will hopefully be better." She said she will figure out another way to commute for five months.

Elsewhere on the Red Line platforms Monday, the plan wasn't selling as well.

"I will be stranded. I won't have a way to work or to drop my kids off at day care," said Conchetta Davis, 22, who lives on the South Side and works in Blue Island.

Katherine Smith, who rides the Red Line each weekday, wondered why it seemed the South Side was getting different treatment than the North Side.

"If they shut the Red Line down, I am going to be late every day—and that's not fair," she said. "The buses make you late."

Cardinal George makes cameo in 'Vatileaks' scandal

Chicago Tribune

Reams of private Vatican correspondence published in a new Italian best-seller reportedly include a plea by Chicago's Cardinal Francis George, urging the Vatican to halt an award to Gov. Quinn for abolishing the death penalty.

George appears to play a minor role in the real-life Vatican whodunit that the Italian press has dubbed "Vatileaks." Last week, the pope's butler was arrested on suspicions that he leaked private letters, including some addressed to Pope Benedict XVI. Those letters reportedly appear in "Your Holiness: The Secret Papers of Benedict XVI," a new book in which Italian writer Gianluigi Nuzzi airs a boatload of Vatican dirty laundry and hints of a reallife conspiracy akin to a Dan Brown novel.

According to Vatican expert John Allen, the book includes what Nuzzi claims is an encrypted 2011 cable from the Apostolic Nuncio in Washington relaying a plea from George to Benedict's Secretary of State. George asks that the Vatican official step in and block the Rome-based Community of Sant'Egidio from giving an award to Roman Catholic Gov. Quinn, Allen said.

Sant'Egidio, a Catholic movement that promotes peace, fights poverty and helps run George's titular parish in Rome, St. Bartholomew, apparently planned to honor Quinn for abolishing the death penalty in Illinois.

Colleen Dolan, a spokeswoman for the cardinal, said George knew about his cameo in the book. But she would not confirm whether the memo was fact.

What's the hangup with dry cleaners?

NEW YORK If your weekly dry cleaning bill already has you cringing, brace yourself for more pain. As soon as your next pickup, prices may be higher.

It's all because of wire hangers. The hangers—which are a big expense for dry cleaners are likely to get substantially costlier after the U.S. imposed new trade penalties on hangers from Vietnam last week. În recent years, many American dry cleaners have come to rely on Vietnamese-made hangers.

Vietnamese manufacturers have benefited from the rising cost of Chinese-made hangers, after the U.S. imposed punitive tariffs on them in 2008, said Sam Monempour, vice president of 3Hanger Supply Company. Back then, the U.S. found that Chinese companies were "dumping" them at prices below production costs.

Now Vietnam faces trade penalties too. The Commerce Department on Wednesday announced it will impose duties as high as 21 percent on hangers made in Vietnam after finding that its government was unfairly subsidizing wire hanger exports.

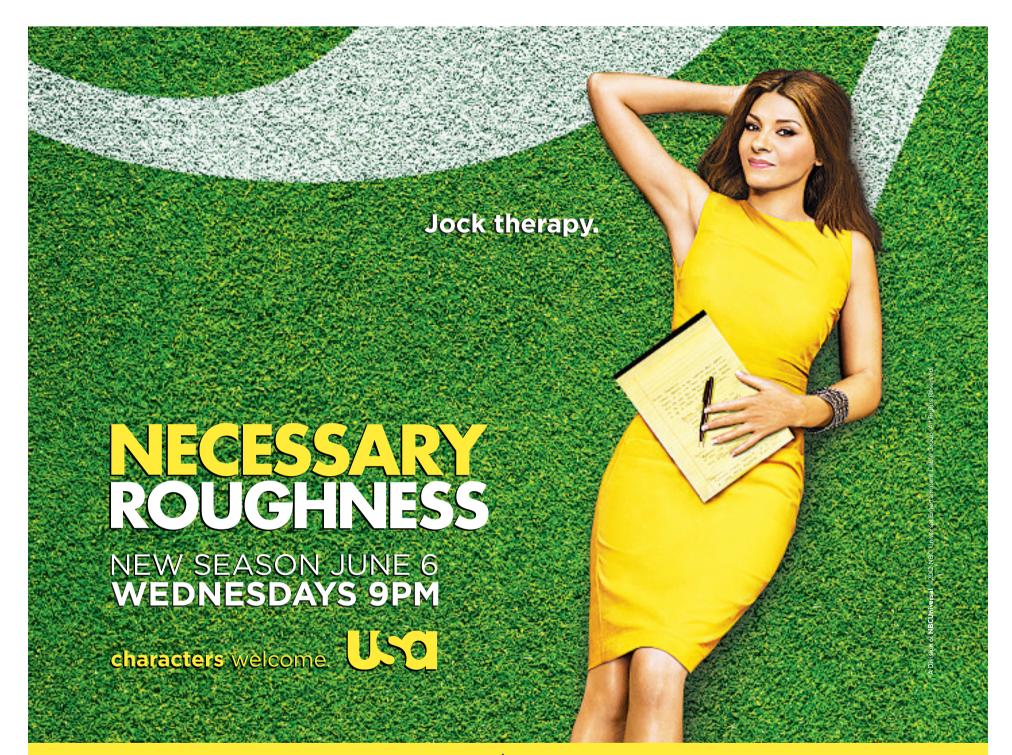

But that leaves wholesalers here with limited options. Monempour said the Vietnamese manufacturers he buys from recently stopped shipping to the U.S. in anticipation of the du-

"I don't have any new shipments coming in right now," said Monempour, whose firm is one of the largest distributors of wire hangers on the West Coast. "I'm in big trouble if this continues."

The number of the least Depressing stats tell the sad story of the Cubs' season

RedEye

There's no good way to put it: The 2012 Cubs are bad. Worst-in-baseball bad.

Of course, we knew this was coming. Cubs President Theo Epstein is reshaping the organization—and the growing pains were expected.

But to see the season playing out as poorly as it is might have even taken longtime Cubs pessimists by surprise.

Here are some numbers associated with the season to forget.

Ventura relies on guts, not stats

Chicago Tribune

When Robin Ventura allowed Chris Sale to finish what he started Sunday, it was based more on a sense of the situation than a study of statistics.

The White Sox manager's desire for Sale to post a confidence-building first complete game outweighed any concern about pitch-count critics.

Remember, Ventura was on the sideline for much of the Sabermetrics revolution, although he is not stuck in the past.

He and his coaches possess every statistic Sox computers can spit out. But they don't rely on them.

Ventura uses the word "feel" a lot, even invoking the name of one-time Cubs manager Don Zimmer, who was as oldschool as they come.

"I'm sure he probably looked at some of [the stat sheets]," said Ventura, who spent time with Zimmer on the Yankees a decade ago. "But he just had a sense of what's going on.

"If you sat next to him and watched, he just had a really good sense, a feel for the game and what guys were trying to do."

When asked recently whether he used statistical matchups when making out a lineup, Ventura replied:

"You do, but it's what you see. The numbers are there, but you're kind of going by what you see and what you feel and what your team is feeling like. To me that's just as important as just looking at numbers."

The Cubs' record so far this season

П	How long can the White
	Sox stay in first place?

For exactly 103.5 more games. Angi, 11I take that $103.50 in cash.

As long as Chris Sale can keep his hunger strike going. As long as they keep ranking nearly last in game attendance. All year if Sox fans can start showing up at games instead of purchasing scratchoffs and WWE material. All season, as long as Detroit plays like the 2011 White Sox.

The Cubs are calling the draft their "Super Bowl." Discuss.

If that's their "Super Bowl," what's their halftime show— Ronnie Woo Woo on a trampoline? They'll make many stupid bets. Oh, the Cubs have given up on the World Series and decided on another championship to not win. Sorry, Theo, it's not the Super Bowl unless I'm drunk on Old Style by 2 p.m. Nice work, Cubs. Now you're never gonna win the Super Bowl either.

Why hasn't LeBron James tweeted since April 27?

He's waiting to instagram the Heat's next locker room meltdown. #followcryday He was hacked. Or at least the refs said he was. He took his talents to blackplanet.com. Figuring out how he'll write about losing to the Spurs in under 140 characters ... Maybe Delonte West hacked into that too.

ke" Apparently somebody only doesn't understand F-book is only for stalking and posting pictures of food.

After spending a ton on s Facebook stock, he thought it would be a great way to get more hits.

Who should be the last person to carry the Olympic torch in London?

Miss Ohio, who'd also like to credit "Pimps Up, Hoes Down" for the suffrage act of 1920. Russell Brand since he's the only Brit Americans know. Adele. She has a problem hanging on to flames way longer than she should. Piers Morgan. Any outside chance of him catching fire is a victory for the Olympic spirit.

David Beckham, Shirtless.

Your very own end-zone dance may score you $25K

By Curt Wagner

Do you have an end-zone dance that would make Terrell Owens jealous? If so, Chicagoans, it could earn you a pile of cash and an appearance on USA Network.

On Tuesday, USA will be checking out your moves in Pioneer Court as part of the "Necessary Roughness" Show Us Your End Zone Dance Competition.

Six finalists, chosen by USA Network judges, will have their dance featured in a promo spot airing on USA in July. And one lucky winner will dance away with a $25,000 grand prize.

The event takes place from 11 a.m.-7 p.m. Tuesday in Pioneer Court (401 N. Michigan Ave. at Tribune Tower), which will be transformed into an urban football oasis complete with an authentic turf end zone.

Football fans, dance enthusiasts and fans of the network's series "Necessary Roughness" can strut their stuff while a DJ spins tunes. A JumboTron and bleacher seating will allow participants and passers-by to watch the competition and see a sneak peek of Season 2 of "Necessary Roughness," which debuts at 9 p.m. Wednesday.

If you aren't one of the finalists, however, don't fret. USA will be doing giveaways and handing out branded goodies, including custom jerseys for every end zone dancer, mini footballs, custom foam fingers and an Instaprint photo station.

NFL might use replacement refs

With negotiations between the NFL and its officials broken down on a new collective bargaining agreement, the league has begun the process of identifying replacements to work games this season.

The old six-year contract expired May 31 with the NFL Referees Association and attempts to reach a new deal have failed so far. The latest mediation efforts took place Sunday in Washington, D.C., the NFL said in a statement Monday. Talks began in October.

"Our goal is to maintain the highest quality of officiating for our teams, players and fans, including proper enforcement of the playing rules and efficient management of our games," the NFL said in a written statement.

"We have great respect for our officials and in keeping with that view have made a proposal that includes substantial increases in compensation for all game officials."

Replacements were called in to work one preseason and one regular-season game in 2001 before a deal was reached with NFL officials after the 9/11 attacks.

The NFL said it will begin regional training sessions for officials later this month.

REDEYE SOUND BOARD

Hungry rock fans have feasted recently thanks to wonderful new musical goodness from artists such as Jack White, Garbage, the Black Keys and Alabama Shakes. The Hives, sadly, forgot to bring their own dish.

"Lex Hives," the Swedish lite-punkers' first release in five years, is an exercise in exhaustively repetitive songwriting. Nothing demonstrates this better than opening track "Come On," which features lead singer Howlin' Pelle Almqvist chanting that very phrase no fewer than 48 times. (Note: That figure does not include his backup "come on"-ers.)

Tracks such as lead single "Go Right Ahead" and "Wait A Minute" use the hotly creative technique of recycling the song title as the chorus, leaving the listener with very little to wonder about.

The album isn't without highlights. "1000 Answers" breaks down the essence of the lines every guy who ever treated you like crap used into, "I got a thousand answers, one's gotta be right/Give me a thousand chances and I'll get it right." And you know you will, too.

Half the songs on "Lex Hives" echo that tone: begging and pleading for something our unknown heroine is unwilling to give. The rest, like "Take Back the Toys," are ready to be done with her. "Without The Money," another angry rout, kicks off with a nice bluesy ramble but, like many other tracks, the instrumentals become garbled and muddy. It's almost as if The Hives don't want you to be able to sing along.

"Lex Hives" is one of those albums you'll listen to once because you're excited, twice because you want to make sure it wasn't better than you thought, and any additional times because you're either reviewing it or it came up randomly on your iTunes. File this one under "forgettable."

ALBUM REVIEW

By Kyle Kramer

FOR REDEVE

There was a time when nobody took Southern rap seriously. According to Mississippi rapper Big K.R.I.T., this is no longer the case. "We make it cool to be Southern" he raps on his major label debut, "Live From the Underground."

He's right, particularly if that "we" includes the guests on his album. After all, those guests-Bun B, 8 Ball & MJG, Ludacrishave made it cool to be Southern for the past

Big K.R.I.T.'s music sounds like a familiar blend of these Southern rap predecessors—its warm soul instrumentals suggest half-remembered Goodie Mob and UGK songs. But where K.R.I.T.'s early, muchbuzzed-about mixtapes delivered lived-in hooks for car stereos and a few charmingly at-ease confessional tracks, "Live From the Underground" forces its feelings. Other than clear highlight "Money on the Floor," uptempo tracks like "I Got This" rely more on raw energy than memorable hooks, while the slower, more soulful songs can drift painfully into self-righteousness. Although K.R.I.T. makes some exciting production choices such as on the bluesy, B.B. King-featuring

Live From the Underground Big K.R.I.T.

"Praying Man," they tend to come with the subtext that this music is a meaningful alternative to some all-corrupting mainstream that doesn't understand the South.

This argument is a bit misleading, considering Atlanta has dominated the entire hip-hop industry for much of the past decade (not to mention the late-'90s surge of Outkast). And as the Internet mixes regional sounds and blurs the line between underground and mainstream, the cutting edge of Southern-indebted hip-hop no longer hides ignored in a country backwater (Google Future or A$AP Rocky instead). There's certainly a lane for K.R.I.T.'s thoughtful '90s revivalism, but it might be wider if he spent less time talking about it and more time seeing where it leads.

A butcher's burger

If there is any chef in Chicago who puzzles the Great Burgerelli, it is Paul Kahan. Though this talented fellow helms the kitchen at two meatcentric restaurants, The Publican and newly opened butcher shop Publican Quality Meats, he has not a single burger on either of his menus. Luckily, Mr. Kahan has seen the light and instituted Burger, Beer, and Bourbon Night at Publican Quality Meats. The inaugural event took place May I and will recur every Tuesday starting June 5. Scarcely able to contain my anticipation, I was one of the first in line when PQM fired up the griddle a few weeks ago.

The burger: PQM will offer two burgers each month: a standard Publican Burger ($10), as well as a rotating special burger that, in the future, may be conceived by guest chefs, I am told. The Publican Burger—the creation of Kahan's chief executive burgermaker, Justin Large—is worthy of top billing; this moist, flavorful patty of mostly Slagel Farms beef is advertised as 5 ounces, but somehow seemed much larger when it arrived at my table topped with a classic slice of American cheese. The patty was cooked to a true medium rare, with a quite-pink center that retained all the wonderful juices and outer edges griddled to a perfect crispness. While a bland patty is an unforgivable offense, this one veered almost too far in the opposite direction, tasting so salty that it necessitated more than one beer to wash it down.

The bun: Baked at Highland Bakery, this thick bun was necessary to capture the juices that stream from the burger's center. The top half fared better than the bottom, which did the most absorbing.

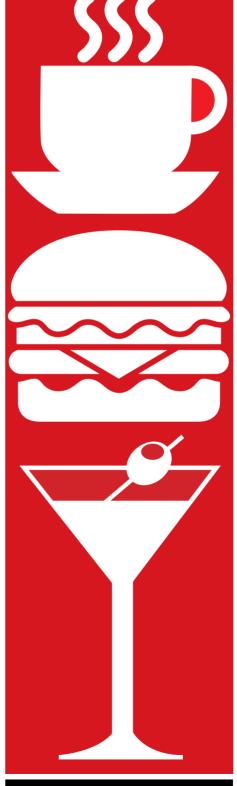

The fixings: Toppings are classic and restrained, including cheese, lettuce, a few sauteed onions and "special sauce." Somewhere between giardiniera and relish, the greenish-andred flecked sauce defies precise categorization but adds crunch and brightness to the meat.

comes with the same thin, oh-so-snackable fries served at Publican, but with all that salt, a beverage or two is quite necessary. Luckily, two of the B's in Burger, Beer, and Bourbon Night do the trick. Craft beer drafts ($5-$6) and bourbon shots ($5) arrive promptly from the busy servers and quickly refresh your palate.

Bottom line: No doubt there will be crowds for PQM's burger night, but I do believe this one is worth the wait.

RESEARCH VOLUNTEERS NEEDED HEALTHY MEN AND WOMEN 18-55 YEARS OLD FALL ALLERGY SYMPTOMS

DO YOU HAVE HAY FEVER IN THE FALL?

Researchers at the University of Chicago are conducting a research study to see whether an experimental nasal spray (not approved by the FDA) is safe and can reduce the signs and symptoms of allergic rhinitis (hay fever).

If you have a history of allergy symptoms only in the fall, but do not currently have any symptoms, and are skin test positive to ragweed you may be eligible to participate in this study. A screening visit, lasting about 2 hours, will take place at the Nasal Physiology Laboratory at the University of Chicago and then two additional study visits will be conducted.

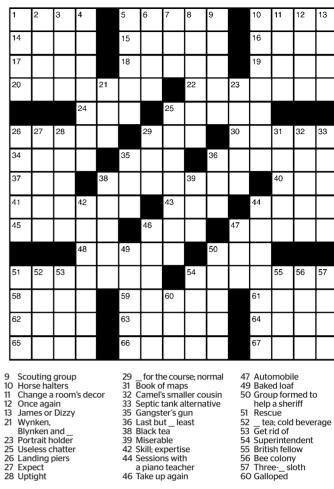

If you are interested, please call 773-702-5889 for more information.

You will receive compensation for your time required to complete the study visits.

You'll have a blast choosing your new favorite reality dating show

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

Summertime: It's the season of booty, right? At least, that's what they taught us in college. Whether you're on the prowl for a spicy new mate or already settled down, there's plenty of room to live vicariously through reality TV. Take our handy quiz to find out which of the summer dating shows that kick off this week is right for you. (Don't worry, you probably still should be watching all of them.) DAMORAN@TRIBUNE.COM | @REDEYEDANA

You're getting dressed for a first date. What do you wear?

A. My most conservative outfit. I want my mate to like me for my personality first.

B. Something that shows off my assets. What's the point of a huge rack or massive pecs if you don't let EVERYBODY know?

C. I must look like a tropical parrot. If I don't stand out, the competition will crush me.

What's the first thing you notice when looking for a mate?

A. The sound of their voice. A sexy coo or deep burly growl can really tell you a lot about a person.

B. Their looks. No, wait, their personality. Don't want to sound shallow.

C. Their confidence. They've gotta be cool under pressure, because I've got a lot of needs.

What's your idea of a great date?

A. Carnival rides! I love those crazy bumper

B. Long walks on the beach, smashing coconuts on rocks and camping out under the stars.

C. Speed dating. I like it fast and furious; too much time with one date and I'm in snoresville.

How do you feel about blind dates?

A. Bring them on! The more anonymous, the better.

B. Meh, they're OK-as long as I can switch them out for another hottie midway through the night.

C. Meh, they're OK-as long as my date can leave me for another hottie midway through the night.

If you could own only one piece of furniture, it would be ...

A. A nice, comfy chair. Let's face it, I spend most of my time on my butt.

B. A hammock. Swaying in the breeze is the only way to be.

C. A lamp. That's a piece of furniture, right?

Do you kiss on the first date?

A. Heck yeah, if I get the chance! Also, if they're really rich and hot, that's a definite turn-on.

B. Kiss, cuddle, etc., etc. All I know is, we'll be sharing a bed.

C. I like to take things slow, but I'm open to it if I'm really wowed by the end of the night.

If you picked mostly A's ...

Your show is "The Choice," airing at 8 p.m. Thursdays on Fox. Basically, it's "The Voice" for daters. Four celebs listen to their potential mates, and push the button to rotate their chairs and view their pick if they like what they hear. Famous daters include The Situation, Rima Faikih, Joe Jonas and Carmen Electra. Hosted by Cat Deeley.

If you picked mostly B's ...

Your show is "Love in the Wild," airing at 8 p.m. Tuesdays on NBC. Host Jenny McCarthy leads single men and women on a wilderness journey for love. Couples who win challenges get to sleep in sweet digs; the losers camp out in gross rainy shanties. At the end of each episode, they can trade their mate for someone else in the dating pool.

If you picked mostly C's ...

Your show is "Take Me Out," airing at 7 p.m. Thursdays on Fox. Thirty women vie for a date with one man (hmmm, this sounds fair) while standing behind lighted podiums. If they get turned off, so does the light. One woman gets a date at the end of the show, and 29 come back for the next round. If nobody likes the dude, away he goes! Hosted by George Lopez.
